Session 1 "Strategic Cultivation of Positive Leadership"

Session 2 "Tactics for Individual and Institutional Transformation"

Session 3 "Voice and Representation at UCCS"

Dr. Patricia Price is the Associate Provost for Academic Administration and Faculty Development at Baruch College, City University of New York. In this role she oversees the Office of Academic Administration and the Sponsored Programs and Research Office, and provides leadership, guidance, and support across all aspects of faculty scholarship, development, professional advancement, and appointments at the College. Prior to coming to the College, Dr. Price served as Dean of Academic Affairs at Guttman Community College, City University of New York. There, she was the sole academic dean at a startup educational institution focused on student success. She developed initiatives promoting faculty scholarship, recognition, and professional development. The full-time faculty increased 68% under her leadership, and she implemented an innovative First Year Sponsor and orientation program. For 19 years before her arrival in New York, Dr. Price was a Professor of Geography at Florida International University in Miami. At Florida International, Dr. Price served in the Office of the Provost as Faculty Fellow from 2011-2013, where she was primarily tasked with piloting an integrated suite of faculty success initiatives. In addition, she held a seven-year appointment in FIU's Division of Research, as Chair of the Institutional Review Boards overseeing human subject research. Price was an American Council on Education Fellow (Class of 2013-2014) and spent her fellowship year working with the presidents of Claremont Graduate University and Harvey Mudd College in Claremont, California. She has obtained significant federal funding for her research from the National Science Foundation and the National Endowment for the Humanities. Dr. Price is an internationally recognized urban and cultural geographer whose scholarship explores Latino/a neighborhood dynamics, critical geographies of race and ethnicity, and diversity in higher education. She has authored four books and numerous journal articles.
